Logan Faculty Library News

Summer 2014

Promoting awareness of library services and resources available for Logan Faculty.

In this Issue:
- Cultural Competence
- New Materials
- Library Chat
- Faculty Development Workshops

Director’s Message

Cultural competence is an area of health care that addresses behaviors, attitudes and developing policies to assist individuals working in cross-cultural situations.

There are many excellent websites and articles which offer guidance to develop resources related to cultural competence.

See page two for a list of these resources.

NEW MATERIALS

Understanding Medical Education: Evidence, Theory and Practice / Swanwick / 2014

A Practical Guide for Medical Teachers / Dent and Harden / 2013

The Leadership Challenge / Kouzes / 2012

How to Read a Paper: The Basics of Evidence-Based Medicine / Greenhalgh / 2010

Clinical Research: From Proposal to Implementation / Tolo / 2010

New eBooks

The Skeletal System: Anatomy (17:00)

The Muscular System: Anatomy (17:00)

New Streaming Video

Browse all of our new materials at:
http://libguides.logan.edu/new_materials

Ellen Dickman, MLS
LRC Director

Christina Prucha, MA, MLS
Cataloger Librarian & Archivist

Sheryl Walters, MLS
Reference & eResources Librarian
The Office of Minority Health has an excellent page related to Cultural Competency. The link contains information about the Center for Linguistic and Cultural Competence in Health Care. If you join the CLCCHC, which is a free registration, you will receive up-to-date information about cultural health.

As always, the National Institutes of Health has developed a wonderful introductory resource defining cultural competence, a Q & A section, as well as links to other web sites.

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services site contains a comprehensive video detailing how effective healthcare communication contributes to health equity.

Don’t miss Cultural Competence 101. This contains information to make a practice more responsive to the needs of culturally diverse populations.

The Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality web site has excellent data, statistics and tools related to cultural competence including an excellent report entitled “Setting the Agenda for Research on Cultural Competence in Health Care”. Don’t miss “The Provider’s Guide to Quality and Culture” as well.

Georgetown University developed the National Center for Cultural Competence. Some online courses are available and the Curricula Enhancement Module Series specifically addresses the need to incorporate cultural and linguistic competence into existing curricula.

Logan University is not responsible for the content of the external websites contained in this newsletter. Furthermore, the views and opinions of the authors expressed in these external websites do not necessarily state or reflect those of Logan University.
Which questions can you ask?

Anything. Here are some examples:

Can I get full text of this article?

How do I access this resource from home?

Do you have this book in the library?

Upcoming Faculty Development Workshops:
Presented by Cheryl Hawk, DC, PhD
11:05am-12pm G134

June 13th - Putting Evidence into Practice
July 11th - Evidence-informed practice and Logan’s new curriculum Part 1
July 25th - Evidence-informed practice and Logan’s new curriculum Part 2

View more details at: Logan / LRC / About the Library / Events & Workshops

Visit our Faculty Resources Guide at http://libguides.logan.edu/faculty